Third-party cookies and tracking technologies

The primary cookies on this site are managed by Grandview Dentistry via our website platform (Wix). This section explains what else is stored on your device, what information leaves this site as you use it, and who receives it.

A cookie is a small file a site stores in your browser. This also covers other techniques that perform similar functions — local storage, tracking pixels, and embedded scripts. They are all treated the same way here.

Information collected as you browse

When your browser loads a resource from an embedded service or third party, that request necessarily reveals your IP address, the type of browser and device you are using, and the address of the page you were reading at the time. That is true of every embedded map, video, booking widget, font, and analytics script, and it happens whether or not you interact with it directly.
